

SIERRA SAGE AGUA CALIENTE CAR CAMP

MARCH 22 – 25, 2019

Spend a leisurely weekend in the lower desert, soaking in warm pools and exploring miles of trails that meander through the park's canyons and over its hillsides where we may spot bighorn sheep! Agua Caliente Park is a camping park nestled in the huge, Anza Borrego Desert State Park and is best known for its geothermally heated springs and rugged desert hiking. Three naturally fed pools provide different ways of enjoying the park's mineral water. Depending on the season's rainfall, wildflowers and succulents put on a colorful show during the spring. The local water supply supports lush plant life such as mesquite, willows, Washington Palms and acacias. A wide variety of wildlife is attracted to these springs, including bighorn sheep, foxes, coyotes, bobcats and other desert animals.

6 camp sites have been reserved, each having room for 2 tents, a picnic table and a fire ring. Optionally, camping cabins with temperature controls, a table with seating for four, two queen size bed frames, a sink, and a bathroom may be reserved, too.

The cost per tent for 2 or 3 nights is $50. This fee includes unlimited use of the thermal pools.

Please note that firewood must be purchased at each campground as the transfer of foreign pests on firewood is a serious problem that threatens native trees and plants. Intoxicating liquors having an alcoholic content in excess of 20% by volume are prohibited in the park.
